SATURDAY 13 MARCH 2010
At ExCeL LONDON

Join us for a varied and stimulating programme of talks, film and musical items

THE GOD CONFUSION

What a brilliant opportunity! There's "God Confusion" everywhere. Best-selling atheists insist in their books and films that God is just a delusion. Multi-faith Britain offers a bewildering array of conflicting religious options. Political correctness suppresses honest discussion: our leaders insist, "We don't do God." But most of us want to know the truth!

"The God Confusion" is a sensational chance, for sceptics and Christians alike, to clear the fog around God.

For one year only, in support of the Passion for Life national initiative, the hugely popular London Men's Convention and London Women's Convention, from churches all over the South East, are combining for a fantastic "flagship" event that squarely addresses our contemporary "God Confusion".

World-class speakers Tim Keller (New York), Al Stewart (Sydney) and Rico Tice (London), a variety of fascinating interviews, films and musical items, short but informative lunch-time seminar options facing current challenges to faith like "Science" and "Suffering" and the thrill of thousands singing God's praise - "The God Confusion" promises to be an unforgettable experience.

The programme is designed for our regular convention crowds and their friends and colleagues. For those with doubts about Christianity, for those scattered far and wide who find it difficult to meet in church, for those who want to hear their questions addressed by the experts and for those who just enjoy the chance to discuss big issues without interruption from the phone or the kids, this day is for anyone seeking the truth about God.

Two great Conventions and their guests uniting for one fabulous day - you won't want to miss this!

Warmly yours,

Richard Coekin
